PERSONAL SAFETY - IN THE EVENT OF ACCIDENT OR INJURY THE NORMAL CODE OF MOUNTAIN SAFETY APPLIES

1. Never allow the pressure of competition to override your sense of Sound Mountain Judgement. The decision to start is yours and the decision to pull out must be yours.
2. Remember this is a team event and your partner is your first point of aid in case of trouble. The buddy system is invaluable in checking for hypothermia. You must never split up. The only exception is in the case of an emergency, when competitors must exercise their own mountain judgment as to the appropriate action to take, including leaving a partner in a warm safe environment to seek help from others.
3. In the event of accident or illness, pitch the tent with the casualty inside in a sleeping bag and ensure they are warm. Use all available aids to insulate them, take careful note of the exact location of the tent. If you have an LED headtorch with flashing feature and can safely spare it, place this on the outside of your tent to attract attention from rescuers. At this stage you should use your mobile phone if you are carrying one, to call for assistance, if not and you judge this the safest option, go for help.
4. In case of retiring, you must make contact with OMM Event HQ directly, preferably in person, or else using the telephone number printed on your map. Do not contact the police to report your retirement. Only contact them in a genuine 999 emergency.
5. It is assumed by the organisers that anyone NOT reaching the overnight campsite will be camped in safety elsewhere. However, where possible your must make contact with Event HQ to make the organisers aware of your plan.
6. SUNDAY - It is your responsibility to get off the hill and to let the event organisers know you are safe. If you have not checked in on Sunday by 1630hrs you WILL be searched for. Pitching a tent on the hill on Sunday night is only allowable in the case of genuine emergencies where you need to be rescued.
